The Swiss Federal Nuclear Safety Inspectorate (ENSI) is the national regulatory body responsible for the nuclear safety and security of the Swiss nuclear facilities.

For our “International programmes” section we are looking for a

SECTION HEAD (m/f)

The “International programmes” section coordinates the exchanges with international regulatory bodies in the nuclear field and acts as counterpart for programmes of international organisations like the IAEA and OECD/NEA. In the area of regulatory research the section is responsible for following up on the national and international research programmes and for the overarching coordination of projects with direct ENSI participation.

Your tasks

- Lead the section in administrative matters
- Contribute to the further strategic development of ENSI international programmes
- Coordinate projects in connection with ENSI international obligations
- Represent the inspectorate in international meetings and working groups
- Write reports on topics related to the section activities (in German and English)

Your qualifications

You need to have a M.S. in a technical discipline with a strong background in the field of nuclear energy. You are acquainted with energy policy issues at the Swiss and international level. Your experience in the nuclear energy field has been acquired working for a regulatory body or an international organisation, which allows you to have an established contact network with the relevant partners. You show initiative and a positive attitude for teamwork. Excellent oral and written communication skills are important for the discussions and negotiations with the different national and international stakeholders. You are fluent in English and German. Knowledge of French is an asset.

We offer a very challenging and multifaceted job with various opportunities for further education and development. The location is Brugg AG (Switzerland).
